

Abstract

This research investigates learners' attitudes and awareness towards Rinex.AI, an AI-driven learning platform. It explores how well learners understand the platform's capabilities, its role in enhancing learning experiences, and their perceptions of its usefulness in achieving educational goals. The findings aim to provide insights into the platform's effectiveness in engaging learners and offer recommendations for improving user experience and platform adoption rates.