

Abstract

This study explores the relationship between payment numbers (or transaction volumes) and income generation at Corizo Edu Tech in Bangalore. It examines how payment patterns and the number of transactions impact the company's revenue generation and financial performance. The study aims to provide insights into optimizing payment processes, enhancing customer acquisition, and improving revenue streams within the performance management framework of the company.